Standards of Business Conduct

Time Warner is committed to conducting global business with high ethical and legal standards. That commitment begins with Time Warner’s Standards of Business Conduct (SBC), available at <http://www.timewarner.com/company/corporate-governance/codes-of-conduct>. The SBC apply to all employees of Time Warner and serve as a model for comparable codes of conduct that have been adopted at each of the Company’s businesses, including offices outside the U.S. The SBC stress the importance of abiding by the law, being truthful, being transparent in our business dealings, putting the needs of our shareholders and customers first, and avoiding excesses and ethical lapses.

Ethical Sourcing and Supply Chain

In addition to the SBC, the Company has policies on specific topics to provide guidance to employees. In 2007, the Time Warner Board of Directors adopted ethical sourcing guidelines, which apply to vendors from whom the Company purchases directly and to whom the Company’s subsidiaries license images, brands and characters. The Guidelines establish expectations for the vendors' business operations as they relate to Time Warner and its businesses and reflect our commitment to conduct business in an ethical manner and in compliance with applicable laws and regulations. The Guidelines set forth Time Warner’s expectations with respect to, among other areas: (1) child labor, (2) involuntary labor, (3) coercion, abuse and harassment of supplier employees, (4) working hours and compensation, and (5) worker health and safety.

Time Warner reserves the right to take any actions it deems appropriate to monitor and promote adherence to the Guidelines. Time Warner's Internal Audit department reviews contracts with vendors as part of its division and departmental audits to confirm whether the Guidelines have been incorporated.
